The Sororan boys are the sons of his late father, and he announced his intention to give private to the lads who should write the best essays on the subject of his remarks, and this produced a large number of compositions. Mr. Trickett has read every essay, marked in corrections where necessary, and the parents of the pupils to the sororans were pleased with these handsome gifts.

Mr. Whittington Johnson, the presiding magistrate, said that the promotion was well deserved, and he was happy to add his congratulations.

REMOVAL OF PUNISHED IN ILOM.—It will be remembered that convicts who were made some time ago to undergo the hardships which were inflicted on prisoners by being forced to walk from one gaol to another, or from the place of trial to the place of imprisonment. Mr. R. E. O'Connor, Minister for Justice, says he has told the Government that this case is in question, the complaints had very little foundation, and he accordingly now made amendments in the regulations for the trial of prisoners. In making these amendments he has been guided by the principle that the only thing that should be given to the authorities was the necessity for taking sufficient precautions to ensure the safe custody of the prisoners on transit, and that in securing that no unnecessary hardship should be inflicted. In this case, Mr. O'Connor explains, the use of leg-irons may be necessary, but in other cases they are clearly not necessary, and the object of the amendment is as far as possible to do away with the use of leg-irons during the removal of prisoners. The new regulations are that when prisoners are to be removed, and the sentence is under five years, leg-irons will be in future dispensed with, unless the previous history of the prisoner or his conduct while in gaol renders special precaution necessary. But when the journey of a convict is to be made by coach, or involves the necessity of sitting or standing on the road at night, and the sentence does not exceed 12 months, the use of leg-irons will be necessary.

THE AUSTRALIAN ELEVEN.

ENGLAND v. AUSTRALIA.

HEAVY SCORING BY THE ENGLISHMEN.

LONDON, Aug. 14.

The test match England v. Australia was commenced to-day on the Kennington Oval. The weather was splendid. An excellent wicket had been pitched, and the ground was in first-rate order.

The following are the respective teams:

England: W. G. Grace (Gloucester-male), W. H. Lockwood (Surrey), A. Moid (Lancashire), J. Briggs (Lancashire), A. McGregor (Cambridge University), A. E. Stoddart (Middlesex), A. Ward (Lancashire), F. S. Jackson (Cambridge University), A. Shrewsbury (Notts), W. Gunn (Notts), and W. W. Read (Surrey).

Australia: J. J. Lyons, G. Giffen, A. Morrison, G. H. S. Trotter, R. McLeod, S. Gregory, H. Graham, W. Bruce, C. T. B. Turner, H. Trumble, and J. M. Blackham.

The greatest interest was taken in the match, and the attendance on the ground was enormous.

W. G. Grace, captain of the home team, won the toss and elected to bat, the captain himself and A. E. Stoddart being the first to go to the wicket. The bowling was entrusted to Turner and Trumble.

The wicket was very fast. Neither Grace nor Stoddart appeared easy at the start, several of their strokes being lucky hits. Stoddart was missed when he had scored 5. They soon, however, settled down, and played quiet, stylish cricket; 48 runs were scored in the first hour. McLeod and Trotter, who had relieved Turner and Trumble, were punished by both batsmen. The first 100 runs were raised in 90 minutes. The scoring became faster after lunch, Stoddart and Grace each having 10 runs respectively as against 16 and 6 in June. Sixty-eight runs were recorded of the 100 runs, and the total score ranged from 15 to 100. Eight ducks of child-bearing women took place during July (one in the city and seven in the suburbs), and there were 12 deaths from feverish disease. Diphtheria and whooping cough are still very prevalent, the deaths from these causes reported during July being 14 and 5 respectively as against 16 and 6 in June.
